PATRIOTISM AROUSED

READING the metropolitan papers one is forcibly struck with the wave of patriotism that is enveloping the nation. On every side corporations, which are commonly reputed to be soulless, are coming forward with generous donations to the cause of the enlisting soldiery. Employers, whose names for the most part are unknown to the ordinary reader, are displaying greater interest in the preparedness and mobilization than could have been expected in such a sordid age, when money is supposed to have driven out every other consideration. The work of enlistment has been simplified by the cheery encouragement of the men who are willing to venture their lives in defense of their country. Railroad managers, bank presidents and manufacturers are reported as telling their men to go forward in response to their country's call with the assurance that they will not be losers in a pecuniary sense. Frequently salaries are allowed to continue so the wives and children will not be subject to any hardships during the absence of the breadwinner. Others who are not in a position to warrant this liberality assure their employees that their old places will be ready to welcome them on their return. The accusation that this is a commercial age and that the spirit of patriotism that distinguished our forebears is dead or decadent is rebuffed from all sides by the spontaneous response to the call of duty. It is not alone the working class that calls for distinction, for the reports tell of the very rich volunteering their services and doing all within their power with the aid of men and money to help the cause along.

The enlisting amounts to an uprising and protest against the hesitation of the administration and proves conclusively that the country is alert to the necessity for instant action to check the marauding bands on the border. The fact that 150,000 men from Atlantic to Pacific sprang into action on the first summons and that, within a few hours, the trumpet call to duty was filling armories in every center of the United States is sufficient to testify to the desire of the masses for action and quick reprisals. In such a crisis it must be patent to the poorest observer that the administration was not in touch with the popular pulse when it essayed to temporize and accept the affront put upon the American people with a patience that even Job would not have manifested.

Nevertheless the truth is omnipotent. The people of these United States can no longer be accused of subordinating duty and country to the accumulation of wealth. There is just as much patriotism today, if not more, than in the days of our revolutionary sires, and before the pacification of Mexico is completed it will be found that every man enlisting under the starry banner will render as good an account of himself as did his ancestors in the civil war. It will be seen further that the odious hyphenated Americanism will be banished and that the war will have its good effects, aside from the mercenary issues created.

"NEVADA, WAKE UP"

THIS is the slogan adopted by the Reno Commercial club in organizing a state-wide movement for the promotion of industry, the encouragement of colonization and the development of latent resources. This is the result of a meeting held last week. The attendance was not as representative as it might have been; in fact the southern country was almost ignored, but that was not the fault of the promoters of the meeting, but rather a manifestation of the old prejudice of the southern mining camps. Yes, it is time for Nevada to wake up. There is nothing new or thrilling about the cry, which has gone ringing down the halls of time without awakening the least echo in the breasts of those who had the chance to do something for their state.

The awakening should be in the form of bringing into notice attractions innumerable for tourist and capitalist. There should be a well developed scheme for advertising native resources and letting the world know that Nevada has no monopoly of the objectionable features of the continent. The true definition of a booster is one who accepts as advertising the knocks of an enemy, for every time a name is mentioned it gives publicity to somebody. If the publicity is not deserved inquiry will promptly disclose the truth and no harm will be done, but should the knocking be without foundation the modern Diogenes will find it out without the aid of an electric searchlight.

If the citizens of Reno would pay a trifle more attention to the Midland trail and not attempt to divert travel by prevaricating about the dangers of desert travel the men of the southern country would be more likely to listen to the blandishments of the commercial club. A score of attractions exist in the desert region and officials of the Midland trail are endeavoring to create interest in a project to establish a picturesque route on the west bank of Walker lake that would enliven the dreary road between Tonopah and Reno. Then there is Schurz with its interesting tribes of civilized and industrious Shoshones and Pah-Utes, the wonder springs of Sodaville, the real, bustling, lively copper camp of Luning where the present day tourist can see a mining camp in the making. These are but incidents that are called to the attention of Reno boosters just to let them know that a more liberal policy must be pursued before any enthusiasm is engendered in this section. The Bonanza stands for state-wide publicity, but it is irrevocably opposed to that sort of publicity which boosts the man across the way while knocking the good neighbor next door.

The Reno Commercial club is on the right track and any effort on the part of the members to bring about a better understanding between the leading communities to the end that Nevada be the gainer should have the hearty co-operation of all fair-minded men and women.

In connection with the advance in the price of silver, it is announced that the French mint, which in ordinary times coined annually 10,000,000 francs in silver, will this year coin more than 80,000,000 francs.

SLIVER OF STEEL STRIKES MINER'S EYE

Riley Laurent was brought in Tuesday from his lease on the Bray anti-mony property in Dry canyon with a sliver of steel in his eye. The misfortune occurred while he was pounding a drill, a particle flying from the drill butt and lodging in the eyeball. The injured eye was treated by Dr. Chevigny and there is apparently no danger that the sight will be lost.

Laurent lost one eye in his boyhood by falling on a broken bottle and it is one of the strange things of fate that made the bit of steel strike the only eye he had left—Reveille.
